THE STORY

Two Years after the Capture of Solomon Lane (Sean Harris), the Remains of his Organization "The Syndicate" have reformed into a Terrorist Group known as "The Apostles". At a Safehouse in Belfast, Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) receives Details of a Mission to intercept the Sale of Three Plutonium Cores to Members of the Group, who are acquiring them for their Latest Client, Fundamentalist John Lark. The Mission takes him to Berlin where he meets up with Benji Dunn (Simon Pegg) and Luther Stickell (Ving Rhames), but the Mission fails when Hunt makes the Choice to save Luther's Life and the Plutonium is taken by the Apostles.

Erica Sloane (Angela Bassett), Director of the CIA, instructs Special Activities operative August Walker (Henry Cavill) to shadow Hunt as he attempts to retrieve the Plutonium. Both infiltrate a Fundraiser Party at the Grand Palais(Paris) where John Lark is set to buy the Cores from the Apostles, with the Arms Dealer known as the White Widow (Vanessa Kirby) acting as a Broker. Hunt and Walker track Lark to a Bathroom where in the Subsequent Fight, Lark is killed by Ilsa Faust (Rebecca Ferguson). To complete the Mission, Hunt impersonates John Lark and meets the White Widow....

OUR REVIEW

It is definitely an Entertainment Machine that skitters around the World and has something to do with Nuclear Bombs, Mysterious Threats and Dangerous Beauties. Tom Cruise runs, drives, dives, shoots, flies, falls and repeatedly teeters on the Edge of Disaster, clinging to one after another Cliffhanger. It is Loyalty that plunges Ethan and the his Crew into their next Adventure in Mission : Impossible - Fallout, the Sixth Film in the Increasingly Exhilarating Franchise.

It is also perhaps the First Film in the Series that feels very much like a Direct Sequel to its Immediate Predecessor - 2015´s Mission : Impossible - Rogue Nation. The Most Obvious Connective Tissue, besides Director Christopher McQuarrie is the Villain, Solomon Lane. This Time, Three Silvery Orbs of Plutonium have fallen into the Hands of the Apostles, an Anarchist Group planning to use them to blow up the Vatican, Jerusalem and Mecca...

Cleanly choreographed Set Pieces see the 56-Year-Old Cruise Bungee-Jumping into the Eye of a Lightning Storm, swishing through a Parisian Club, swinging through the Bowels of London´s Tate Modern and rasping Lines... Director Christopher McQuarrie cleverly controls the Ticking Clock Quality that makes this Film so much fun.
